KILLED IN A WELL.

John Livesey Meets His Death While at Work.

A SAD AND SUDDEN FATALITY.

By the Breaking of a Rotten Rope a Hard-Working Citizen is Hurried Into Eternity.

The citizens in the eastern half of the city were horrified at about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, by the intelligence, which circulated rapidly, that a man named John Livesey, had been killed while engaged in rocking a well for Mr. William Strong, a half block east of the Tenth Ward meeting-house.

A reporter of THE HERALD immediately sought the source of the rumor, and visited, first the scene of the sad fatality, and afterward the home of the victim, where the unfortunate young man, who a few brief hours before was in the vigor and bloom of life, was laid out, a ghastly corpse.

Coroner Taylor was summoned as soon after the accident as possible, and he with a jury composed of Messrs. J. H. Freeman, John A. Hillstead and J. B. Taylor, conducted an investigation into the shocking affair.

From the evidence adduced, it appeared that the deceased was engaged in rocking a well on the premises of William Strong, on Fourth South Street, between Eighth and Ninth East, and was down in the well, with two young men—"Jimmy" Ashman and Hyrum Strong—on the surface, manipulating the windlass and lowering rock to Livesey. They had been at work since morning, and had consumed nearly a cord of stone. At about 3 o'clock, a box of rock was being lowered, and had gone down a few feet when the rope which was passed under the box and connected with the windlass rope, broke, and the contents, a heavy rock, descended upon the head of Livesey, who was sitting upon a short two-inch plank at a depth of about twenty feet from the surface, doubling him up and forcing him down, head first, into seven feet of water at the bottom of the well. It is supposed that the unfortunate man was dead before he struck the water, so great was the force of the fall of the heavy stone.

The plank upon which Mr. Livesey was sitting when struck was broken in two and also carried down to the water. Both the young men at the windlass were horror-stricken when the rope gave way, and they heard the thud and splash in the well, and were so bewildered that they hardly knew what to do. Young Strong, who had hold of the windlass rope and brace-leather, turned instantly on feeling the break, and saw the water splash, and on looking for Livesey and not seeing him, ran directly for help.

William C. Cater, an aged resident of the Tenth Ward, who was just returning from "up town," happened by at the time and volunteered to make the descent of the well and bring up Livesey. A grappling iron was secured, Mr. Cater was let down by the windlass rope, and on reaching the water found the victim of the accident, feet up, and seizing him pulled him to the top of the water, fastened the grappling iron to one of his legs and had him hauled to the surface by the windlass.

An examination of the corpse revealed a frightful gash on the top of the skull, near the brain, in which one might insert three fingers; a bruise on the left of the forehead and one on the left cheek bone. The first named was undoubtedly the one that caused death, as one of the witnesses stated that when the body was brought up from the deadly depths he examined it and found the head so loose that he concluded the neck was broken.

The box and ropes used by the well-rockers were in the room at the inquest, and a glance at the first showed it to be in an unfit condition for the use to which it was put, and had evidently not been in active service for a long time. The wood was decaying and the fastenings which formed the basket-like hold were absolutely rotten, the rope being easily pulled to pieces with finger and thumb. But rigid questioning and cross-questioning by the coroner failed to attach any blame to those engaged in helping the deceased, who thoughtlessly allowed the use of the dangerous box in the hoisting and lowering.

After due deliberation and a careful inquiry into the cause of the accident, the following verdict was rendered:

An inquisition holden at the residence of John Livesey, in the First Precinct of Salt Lake City, this 14th day of March, 1887, upon the body of John Livesey, the living defendant, by the jurors whose names are hereto subscribed. The said jurors on their oath do say: from the evidence presented, that "he died in a well, on the premises of William Strong, on Fourth South Street, between Eighth and Ninth East Streets, at 3 p.m., March 14th, A.D. 1887, from the effects of injuries from an accidental fall of rock."

J. H. FREEMAN, J. B. TAYLOR, Jurors.

GEORGE J. TAYLOR, Coroner.

Deceased was a young man, 47 years of age on the 21st of last January. He was born in St. Louis, and has been in Utah for twenty-five years. He was known by all as a steady, honest, hard working man, one of those whom the community can ill afford to lose. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss, the last one being ushered into the world a few hours after his father was so unceremoniously hurried out into the ether. Considerable sympathy was expressed for the young widow and her little ones in the dire calamity which has overtaken them, and no doubt substantial aid will be rendered them in their hour of trial.

Uncle Tom Coming.

Of McFadden's Uncle Tom's Cabin Company, which opens in the Theatre on Friday evening, an exchange has the following: "A particular feature represented is the ten colored plantation singers. They are the best in the country, and will introduce the great plantation festival and Mississippi steamboat scene, the jolly coon quartette and south Carolina slave singers, and a host of new and original novelties characteristic of the south before the war."

IT MADE THEM SMILE.

The Verdict in the Case of Durnell vs. Sowden.

The case of Eliza Durnell vs. Joseph Sowden has occupied the greater portion of the time of the Third District Court since Friday last, and was resumed on the opening of court yesterday morning. The jurors were manifestly growing somewhat weary of the intricacies of the law when the arguments were closed, and they were retired to the seclusion of the jury room in the charge of an officer.

The case was given to the jury shortly before the noon recess, and some time before the court re-assembled at 2 p.m. they had agreed upon a verdict. At 2 o'clock, they filed into the room, and through their foreman handed the verdict to the Judge. The suit had been brought to recover the amount called for in the promissory note—$200 and interest, and the only question seemed to be as to the signature to the note. There was no question raised as to the amount, and a verdict was expected for the entire amount. It was decided that the signature was a genuine one. There was no little astonishment created in the room, however, and more particularly among those interested when it was learned that the jury had found for the plaintiff, giving her $300. Mr. Sheeks was on his feet in a minute. The verdict, he said, was certainly not in accordance with the evidence, and he at once gave notice of a motion for a new trial.

ON HIS EAR.

The Judge of the Second District Turns Loose.

It is learned from Beaver that Judge Boreman is again on his ear, and has indulged in one of those Methodist revival sort of charges which seem to bring balm to his soul. The court met on the 7th inst., and an entire week was occupied in impelling the grand jury, sixty-nine people undergoing examination before the requisite number was obtained. Allan G. Campbell was elected foreman. Judge Boreman's charge was very temperate and impartial, until he came to mention polygamy and unlawful cohabitation, when he flew from his pedestal of dignity as usual, and floundered about in a manner not at all pleasant to witness. There was the usual reference to the blot on the fair name of America or similar allusions; polygamy and unlawful cohabitation must be rooted out, and it lay within the province of the jury then impelled to make a move to that end. He deplored what he claimed to be a fact, that the people were governed by a priesthood. The government, he said, in the past, he said, been very lenient towards the people here, and it was the only Territory where, in certain cases, appeals were allowed to the court of last resort—the Supreme Court of the United States. An interesting session of the Second District is looked for.

Before Judge Zane.

In addition to the cases mentioned elsewhere, the following business was transacted before Judge Zane, yesterday:

United States vs. M. M. Bane et al.; dismissed at request of prosecutor.

People vs. Shively; set for Wednesday, 2nd.

Charles E. Gowan, of England; James Price, of Ireland, and Charles J. Bentzen, of Denmark, were admitted to citizenship.

Oliver Hodgson was excused from serving as a petit juror.

Estate of Aurilla Hood, deceased; leave to amend petition denied; exception.

Adjourned till this morning at 10 o'clock.

Card of Thanks.

G., who in a body attended his remains to the cemetery; also to Bishop Pollard, of the Fifteenth Ward, and the Sunday school choir for their consoling services, and to all who have administered acts and words of comfort in our hours of affliction.

HAD NO PROMISES TO MAKE

H. F. Thorup Refuses the "Olive Branch."

Mr. H. F. Thorup appeared before Judge Zane last evening to receive sentence, he having previously been convicted of unlawful cohabitation. In response to the queries of the judge, the defendant said he was a poor man, with a large family dependent upon him, and he hoped for as lenient a sentence as could possibly be given.

The Judge—When did you marry your last wife?

A—About five years ago.

Q—You can give no assurances that you will obey the law in the future?

A—I can give no promise, your honor.

Q—Well, of course, if you violate the law when you come out, you will be again sent to punishment.

A—Yes, sir.

Q—You have no money to pay a fine, you say?

A—No, sir.

Q—Well, you will pay a fine of $25 and costs, and be imprisoned in the Penitentiary for a term of six months, and stand committed until the fine and costs be paid.

Mr. Thorup went out to the Pen. a few minutes later. He was unattended by counsel or relatives or friends.

BLOOD ON THE MOON.

A Shotgun, a Colonel and an Irish Park City Man.

If half the rumors that occasionally reach us from Park City be true, there is more than a possibility of blood being shed there within a very short time. The cause of the ill-feeling is said to be the recent decision in the township case. It was learned yesterday, that on Thursday last a gentleman who is well known in that camp, was hunting a prominent man of the burg, and was very anxious to meet him. The desire, however, did not seem to be a mutual one, and the "colonel" took to that popular route familiarly known as the underground, being hastened somewhat in his flight by the fact that his pursuer had in his possession a double-barreled shotgun, which had been carefully loaded with a view to lodging the contents into the colonel's body. At last accounts, however, the friends of both parties had interceded, and the shotgun had been buried under protest, with a threat that unless the colonel remained in a quiescent state, it would be resurrected at the earliest opportunity.

OVERTAKEN AT LAST.

The Boys Who Have Been Classed as Hoodlums.

The rowdy element which has caused so much trouble to people in the Ninth Ward has, it is hoped, at last received a check, by the police arresting five of them. Their names are William Perry, Robert Bates, Benjamin Bircumshaw, Teddy Marks and Charles B. Darke. They are charged, on a complaint sworn to by Isaiah Coombs, with willfully and maliciously disturbing the peace and quiet of the neighborhood in and about Fifth South, between Third and Fourth East Streets, and of the persons there residing, being and passing, by loud and unusual noise, by tumultuous and offensive conduct, by swearing and calling each other G—d—s—s—s of b—s, riding a bucking horse on the sidewalks, to the annoyance of said neighborhood and persons.

The two boys, Perry and Darke, were the only ones out of the five arraigned yesterday, the other three having been released on the promise to be present and not having turned up when the case was called. The two named entered pleas of not guilty, and their cases were set for trial at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

A Verdict for Both.

The case of William (Ayrton) vs. Thomas F. Tennant came up before Judge Zane yesterday afternoon, Le Grand Young appearing for the defendant and Arthur Brown and E. B. Critchlow for the plaintiff. The suit was brought to recover $930 alleged to be due to plaintiff for the care and sustenance of defendant's mother, who, for many years past, has not been of sound mind. In his answer the defendant set up a counter claim for $200, alleged to be due from Ayrton, and also charged gross negligence and brutality on the part of the plaintiff. The trial occupied the afternoon session of the court, and as both sides waived a jury, the decision was rendered by Judge Zane, who found for the plaintiff in the amount claimed for board, and for the defendant in the amount alleged to be due for rent. It seems to have been purely a family affair, and one that should properly have been settled outside of the court room.

Painful Accident.
